Frequently Asked Questions

What does Lighthouse do?

Lighthouse makes move-in much more affordable for renters by providing a Letter of Credit (“LOC”), which guarantees property managers the protection they need from losses caused by unpaid rent and damages beyond normal wear and tear. Renters benefit from Lighthouse by spending less money at move-in while still satisfying coverage requirements, and making expenses like property damage much more manageable at move-out.

What is a Letter of Credit?

A Letter of Credit (“LOC”) serves as a financial safeguard for property managers. It represents a commitment from Lighthouse to the property manager, guaranteed by the renter, to ensure the renter fulfills their financial responsibilities outlined in their rental agreement, including paying rent and maintaining the property without causing damage (beyond normal wear and tear). If these conditions aren’t met, the LOC compensates the landlord up to a predetermined amount that the tenant has guaranteed and must reimburse.

How is it different from a normal security deposit?

Similar to a normal security deposit, it protects the property manager from financial losses related to unpaid rent and property damage (beyond normal wear and tear). However, instead of renters paying a much larger refundable deposit in full at the start of a lease, they can keep more money in their pocket by paying a much more affordable, but non-refundable annual fee. This fee, due with each new lease term, secures the property manager a predetermined amount of funds should they experience a loss related to a tenancy. If it’s determined a renter owes anything under Applicable Law, they’ll be notified and convenient repayment plans are available.

How much does it cost?

Tenants typically save several hundred dollars or more at move-in, however rates vary based on factors such as a soft credit pull (which will not affect their credit) and the amount of credit requested by the landlord.

Am I still responsible for damages?

Yes. If your property manager files a valid request for payment from your Lighthouse coverage on loss of rent or property damage under Applicable Law, you are still financially responsible, up to your credit limit, for these expenses, and must repay Lighthouse in addition to your non-refundable annual Issuing Fee.

What happens if I renew my lease?

Once initiated, Lighthouse renews automatically with each new lease term. Before your lease ends, you will be notified of the upcoming renewal and, if needed, you’ll be asked to review/update your payment information. A renewed Issuing Fee will then be processed and your LOC will renew for the following lease term.

Is this like Renters Insurance?

No, Lighthouse is not an insurance product. Renters Insurance may cover loss of personal property, liability, and additional living expenses; Lighthouse is for the protection of the landlord or property manager only.
